

The Ordinary Superpowers of Smiley Ryley

By: Amelia McCarthy, rising 5th grader

In Pigland, all the pigs are nice and friendly, except a small band of bullypigs that had recently arrived. Bullypigs are mean nuisances to their community. They are unfriendly, and well, bullies in every way with their actions and words. Bullying is bad.

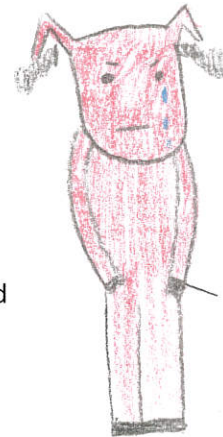

One day, Superpig came to Pigland to save the day and all pigkind from the bullypigs. She would help the bullypigs change their ways with a combination of kindness, super-secret hugs, smiles, and special cookies. Superpig's smiles are as bright and big as the sun. The cookies she bakes and shares magically taste like each pig's favorite flavor. Then everything would be fixed (because every pig love cookies!)

The bullypigs mean words and mean deeds were creating craziness around Pigland. Superpig approached all the bullypigs one by one. She spread her combination of goodness on to all of them, and with each smile and hug, they grew kinder.

When she met one lonely pig, he was mad and sad that the bullypigs were making fun of him for his straight tail. When Superpig approached the bullypigs about their bullying one of them said, "I thought bullying was cool! Every pig does it." "There should be no picking and teasing. We treat others the way we want to be treated," Superpig said. She hugged the bullypigs and encouraged them to stop their bullying. She gave them magical cookies, and they also started to squeal with delight.

She told the bullypigs, "When you see others smile, it makes you happy to know they are having a good day. So if you smile, it makes them smile. When you do acts of kindness, like giving cookies or smiles, the other pig feels love.”

The bullypigs were both smiling as Superpig went on her way. Her smile and words had changed their hearts and minds.

There was only one pig left. It was the biggest baddest bullypig of all. No cookie or hug could fix this! She would have to use her talk-it-out Superpig powers.

Superpig sat down with the big bullypig and talked everything out. Bullypig had grown into his own sad ways because he thought that others didn't like him. He wanted friendship. He wanted to be included. He wanted to be understood. He had been laughed at. He took his grumpiness and sadness out on others. Superpig explained that if he would give kindness, he would receive kindness.

The more kindness and understanding that Superpig gave the big bullypig, the kinder he became. The bullypig was feeling better. The Superpig gave the bullypig one of her famous hugs, and he melted. It got rid of all his worries. She told him to spread hugs everywhere he went. To top it all off, Superpig gave bullypig a honey peach chocolate chip cookie. It magically was his favorite.

With all the bright smiles, kind words and actions, and bellies full of cookies, Pigland was restored to its beautiful existence.

TOP SECRET

Superpig's identity is just Smiley Ryley the ordinary newspaper pig. Anyone can be a kindness superhero. Kindness always starts with K, includes a hug, and never ends. Spreading smiles, kind words, kind actions, and giving hugs everywhere you go is how you make the world a better place. And cookies. Cookies also make the world a better place 😊

Stay tuned for the next chapter of Superpig, where Superpig pitches her magical cookie recipe for funding to successful Pig Entrepreneurs on Pig Tank with Mr. Pigful.

